

DID MILLIONAIRE CROUSE WED HER?

Story of a Marriage with Grace Wilson in a Third Avenue Hotel.

Syracuse, Dec. 6.—The impression prevails in Syracuse that in fixing the identity and comb of Mrs. Kosterlite THE SIX has revealed the mystery connecting the late D. Edgar Crouse with a woman claimant against his estate. Since the story was published the interested heirs have had ample opportunity to examine it with the view of finding flaws, but it was confessed to-day by one of them that the story hangs together with singular consistency. The tale is not comparable with the known circumstances, and the details minute enough to admit of verification.

It is found that Mr. Crouse was in New York at the periods mentioned and not in New York so frequently when the woman was abroad. Nevertheless, not many people familiar with the millions are persuaded that he was the husband of the woman, though the story is to the effect that while in a prolonged debauch he was led into a marriage, performed, it is said, at a hotel in Third avenue, New York. Mr. Crouse was not addicted to drink in ex-citation, nor two occasions is known to have deviated from his usually strict habits.

There is one person in the world who knows of Mr. Crouse's exact relations with Grace Wilson or Mrs. Kosterlite. It is his son, William Crouse, who was his constant attendant for fifteen years. Little never left Mr. Crouse's side.

Crouse is dumb as an oyster regarding the revelations made by THE SIX, but is careful not to let his son know of his secret.
